It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

REPAIRS ON STATE HOUSE.

In my biennial reports of 1898 and 1900 I called attention to the repairs needed on the Capitol building. I desire now to emphasize my former recommendations and to call the attention of the Legislature specifically to repairs absolutely needed.

The superintendent of the building, Captain R. J. Beck, together with Professor Ricker, professor of architecture in the Champaign university (who very kindly tendered his services), have made a complete examination of the building, and I incorporate in this report a detailed statement of the needs of the building made by Professor Ricker. (This includes recommendations not only for needed repairs, but also for new vaults and extension of law library.)

Hon. James A. Rose, Secretary of State of Illinois, Springfield, Illinois:

DEAR SIR:—In accordance with your instructions and with the assistance of Captain Beck, I have made a careful examination of the present condition of the State Capitol building, and I beg leave to present the following report thereon, which includes the repairs necessary to protect and preserve the building from further damage and to replace it in its original condition.

The building appears to have been well built originally, so far as concerns the masonry, for I have found very little evidence of unequal settlement of foundations or of defective construction. But the metal roof is very old, was never properly planned or constructed, and although it has received frequent repairs, it still permits the rain water to enter the upper masonry at many points, disfiguring the exterior of the building and the internal decorations, and seriously injuring the masonry of the upper walls. Unless further injury be promptly prevented by a tight roof of proper and permanent construction and materials, the building will soon require very costly and extensive repairs to the masonry, as well as the redecoration of a large proportion of the interior, especially in the upper story. The different items will be taken up in detail, in the order in which they were examined.

1. The Main Roof.—This was originally covered about 30 years since with a metal roof of sheet zinc, which is very seldom used for roofing in the United States, though common on European buildings. Since zinc expands and contracts more than any other metal, 2.5 times as much as steel or 1.7 times as much as copper, under variations of temperature, suitable provision must be made to permit this in using the metal. Therefore, it was here laid in long and wide sheets, whose edges are turned up against beveled wooden strips about three inches high, which run from the edge to the ridge of the roof. These edges and the strip are then covered by a sheet zinc cap, turned down outside them on both sides and fastened to the wooden strip, but which does not nearly extend down to the surface of the roof. This cap has in many places sprung away from the sheets, leaving a large crevice between it and the upturned edge of the sheet, which permits the wind to drive rain and snow sideways between them, so that water gets under the metal roofing and either drips through the roof beneath or follows it down to the top of the external wall. The ends of the long sheets of zinc are locked together and a drop is made on the roof to prevent the water from running back under the metal, which cannot be soldered there.

A large portion, perhaps one-half, of this zinc roof over the main building has been replaced by one of sheet copper laid in smaller sheets, but which are locked together and soldered around all their edges, leaving no chance for expansion or contraction. Hence, contraction during very cold weather pulls open some of the joints, causing leaks there, so that these joints require continual repairs and constant precautions to prevent bad leaks.

For these reasons I have to condemn this roof as entirely insufficient to protect the building from very serious injuries by water, and therefore recommend as a prime necessity that the entire metal roof of the main building be removed and be replaced by one of best 16 oz. copper in sheets not over 20 inches wide, laid in the best manner with standing seams not less than one inch high after being turned over twice, strongly cleated to the roof every foot in length of seam, and joints locked and soldered with proper provision for expansion and contraction at ends of strips. If properly laid, this roof would be permanent, except for injury by accident or carelessness.

2. Deck Roofs of North and South Mansard Pavilions or Attics.—These roofs were also covered with sheet zinc, laid in the manner just described for the main roof. Although more nearly horizontal, they are in much better condition, perhaps because smaller, and have not been much patched with copper or tin. They do not appear to leak at present, and may last for several years longer. But these roofs cover very important rooms in the building, where leaky roofs would soon cause great injury to the construction and to the decorations.

Therefore, I advise as a matter of common prudence that they be likewise removed and be replaced by the kind of copper roof recommended for the main roofs.

3. Main Gutter and Covering of Main Cornice.—These are covered with sheet copper in pieces about 5 feet long, and making a strip about 7 feet in width from top of cornice to edge of zinc main roof. This covering is composed of copper sheets locked and soldered at all joints, fixed to top of cornice at one edge, and to edge of metal roofing at the other, thus without opportunity for contraction, except by tearing open the cross joints, which causes leaks and a necessity for constant repairs after every spell of very cold weather.

An examination of the stained and injured stone frieze of the principal cornice around the entire building and of the upper parts of the internal surfaces of these outer walls shows that a considerable quantity of water runs into the top of the wall at many places, and it appears most probable from the condition of the gutter that the larger portion leaks through the main gutter. The most serious damage caused by these leaks may be found in the upper end galleries of the library, where a large part of the wall is covered by a nitrous efflorescence, and the decorations have been entirely destroyed.

Therefore as a primary necessity, I recommend the removal of these gutters and that they be replaced by others of best 16 oz. sheet copper, cross seams locked and soldered, side seams locked to main metal roof and to a copper strip covering the flat outer portion of the main cornice, with proper expansion joints at the high points in the gutter, all laid in the best manner, to permit contraction without breaking the joints and producing leaks.

The leaders or down spouts are rather too far apart for a roof of this size, making the gutters too long and liable to overflow in heavy rainfall or when partially filled with wet snow or ice.

After these new gutters are put in, the external stone entablature should be carefully examined and all scales, efflorescence and stains be removed by steel wire brushes. Some joints are open and should be repointed with a light German cement mortar, which will not stain the stone.

4. Skylights on Main Roof.—These admit light to the attics over the ceiling skylights in the Senate chamber, Hall of Representatives, grand staircase, etc. They were built of iron and glass before modern and much better systems were devised, and they are also not closely or properly flashed to the metal roof, so that some leakage may occur around them during storms. There seems to be no provision for collecting and removing the condensation caused by contact of the warm and moist air of the attic beneath with the cold metal and glass of the skylight. This generally causes constant dripping in cold weather, even where the skylight is perfectly tight.

Therefore on account of the importance of their location and the necessity of preventing all drip and leakage, I recommend as a necessity that they be removed and be replaced by others of the best construction, with provision for catching drip, filled with rolled plate glass not less than five-sixteenths of an inch thick, set in pieces the full length, all properly flashed tight on the new roof by overlapping not less than six inches.

The iron and wire skylight guards are in good condition and merely require repainting for their preservation.

5. Mansard Roofs of North and South Pavilions or Attics and of the two Square East Towers.—These roofs are all of convex curved section, similar in form and construction, and they are externally covered with sheet zinc shingles of large size, stamped in ornamental form to stiffen and decorate them, interlocking at one side. The hips are covered by wide stamped zinc bands and roll, merely extending over the zinc shingles, and there is a heavy ornamental zinc cornice at top around the edge of the deck roof. These roofs are framed with vertical curved ribs set about 30 inches apart, every third one being of iron and the others of wood. On these are fastened small horizontal wooden strips about one foot apart, on which are fixed the zinc shingles. There is no sheathing whatever under these shingles, but originally lathing and plastering were fastened to the inner edges of the curved ribs. This has since been removed, except for the ceiling, so that the shingles spring apart, owing to the curved shape of the roof, leaving free entrance for wind, snow and rain between them. There are many large holes in the shingles, and some are entirely gone. It is a very inefficient roof and there must be much leakage through it, which so far has been partially absorbed by the concrete floors of the attics.

Therefore I recommend as a primary necessity that these zinc shingles be removed, that these mansard roofs be covered externally with narrow matched sheathing of good quality, that this be then covered with No. 1 Ruberoid sheathing felt, and that on this be laid a new metal roof made of 16-ounce copper shingles stamped in an ornamental pattern, shaped to closely fit the curved roof. Also that the hip bands and rolls be replaced by others of 16-ounce copper, simpler in design, and that the deck cornice of zinc be replaced by a simpler one of 16-ounce copper, all closely fitted and fixed in the best manner. Further, that copper gutters be put in, properly flashed and fixed, at the base of these mansard roofs, to replace the zinc gutters now used there on the building.

6. Ornamental Facing and Dormer Window Finish of the North and South Pavilion Mansard Roofs.—The upper round windows are now finished with zinc, but this should be replaced with copper to match the proposed new roofs, all made tight. Perhaps some of the woodwork would require to be made new also.

The large dormer windows open into the attics. Their outer wooden sills are badly cracked and should be replaced by new ones, and probably new frames would be required as well. One stone window sill had been so far displaced that its inside edge was not covered by lap of the wooden sill, thus permitting water to run down between them and enter the top of the wall. There seems to be no iron water-bar to make tight the joint between the wooden and stone sills of the windows. And this is probably true for all the windows in the entire building.

This masonry facing around the lower part of the pavilion mansard roofs extends about 4 feet high, and above the main metal roof is of stone, some blocks displaced by frost. But above the external walls, this facing and the finish around the windows are made of some kind of artificial stone, said to be concrete, but very fine-grained and more nearly resembling a cream-colored, soft-burnt terra cotta. Most of this work is still sound, but a considerable number of blocks have disintegrated and are liable to fall off at any time, and unless caught by the main cornice, they would fall to the ground and might destroy life.

This entire facing and finish should have been constructed of stone of the same kind and color as that used for the exterior of the building, and would have been as effective if simpler in design.

I recommend as advisable for permanent construction and for proper treatment of a building of such cost and importance to the State, that all this artificial stone facing and window finish be removed and be replaced by stone facing and finish of simpler design, to match in color and effect the exterior of the building.

But if this can not be done at this time, the very least that should be done is to thoroughly examine all this work, to remove all blocks and parts injured in any degree by exposure, replacing them by stone blocks of similar color, cut to the same general form, though omitting ornamental details. This should be considered as being merely temporary repairs done to preserve this artificial stone facing for a limited period.

The use of this artificial material was evidently an error of judgment, caused by a desire to obtain a more ornamental effect, or more probably to reduce the cost below that of similar work executed in natural stone.

7. Main Balustrade Above Main Cornice.—This is 3½ feet and 5 feet high, made in two different patterns. The base and rail are of natural stone blocks, clamped together at ends of long pieces, but the rails are not wide and are entirely without any side bracing against wind. The pedestals and the balusters and ornamental filling between rail and base are made of the artificial stone or terra cotta just described, and the pedestals are partly filled in with bricks at their backs. The balusters of the higher balustrade were sound, so far as I could see, but the smaller balustrades on the east and west fronts contain many disintegrated and crumbling pieces, in long lines unstayed sidewise, and it might easily be thrown over by a cyclone or by the falling out of some crumbling balusters. Much of the balustrade would certainly fall over the main cornice in such a case, and thus it is a constant menace to life in its present condition.

Therefore for due safety to life around the building, I recommend that the lower balustrade be rebuilt with proper iron stays or braces to the main roof; that all artificial material be replaced by a simpler design executed in stone to match the rail and base. The higher balustrade is in much better condition and might remain for the present, replacing any damaged parts that may be found.

8. Main Entablature Around Building—The crown moulding of the cornice is elaborately decorated and is made of the same artificial material previously described, but so far as I could examine it, it appeared to be sound. All large ornaments on the pediments should be carefully examined and be replaced if disintegrated.

The leakage through the gutter has injured the external stone surfaces in many places, and these should all be cleaned with steel brushes and all open joints be raked out and pointed with light cement as previously recommended.

9. Pointing Stone Masonry Above Roof—The stone masonry above the main roof does not appear to have been pointed after setting, so that water enters it freely everywhere through the open joints. Some stones have been displaced considerably by frost and should be replaced. All open joints should then be raked out and carefully repointed with light cement mortar, using a kind that does not discolor the stone and tinting it to match the color of the stone. Only the shafts of the columns on the exterior of the dome were properly pointed, so far as I could see. Unless this pointing be done at once, very serious and permanent injury to the masonry of the dome will soon be produced and probably now exists in the heart of the masonry walls.

10. The Metallic External Dome—The external masonry of the dome otherwise appears to be well built and in good condition, from its base up to its top, where the metallic external shell is fixed on it. The internal ornamental shell, visible from below, is in good preservation, with very few small holes that I noticed. But the external shell dome, visible on the exterior of the building, is made of sheet zinc, supported by a series of curved iron latticed ribs bolted to the top of the masonry and fastened together at top just below the lantern on the apex of the dome.

Except at the base of this dome, between the upper row of small square windows, and just below the lantern, the metal covering of the dome is fixed on wooden sheathing supported by the iron ribs, so that it was not possible to observe from the interior the condition of the covering there. But where this sheathing is omitted at the base and the top, I found numerous large holes and cracks in the zinc covering, one being several square feet in area. These holes seem to have been caused by the cracking of the metal after it was fixed in place, perhaps by the effect of bending under heavy winds, and probably because zinc appears to become brittle by exposure. The condition of this dome is nearly as bad as that of the mansard roofs covered with stamped zinc shingles previously described, so far as keeping out wind, rain and snow is concerned. It is possible that the condition of the metal covering on the exterior of the sheathed portion of the dome is just as bad. The actual amount of leakage through the dome could only be observed during a heavy driving rain, which did not occur during my examination of the building. From the bad condition of the dome, considerable water is probably blown in by high winds and either drips on the floors beneath the internal dome, or is absorbed by the upper masonry supporting the dome.

Certainly, if this building belonged to private owners this zinc covering would immediately be replaced by a weather-tight covering of sheet copper, in order to permanently protect this very important part of the interior of the building. I consider it to be only less dangerous than the metal roofs of the main building.

Therefore, I recommend that the zinc covering of the external dome be replaced by one of 16-ounce copper as soon as this can be conveniently done, this being put on in the best possible manner.

11. Windows and Their Woodwork.—There are probably no iron water-bars below windows in the building, to prevent entrance of water between the stone and wooden window sills. The wooden sills are in very bad condition many being cracked and also being too nearly horizontal to shed water properly. All the external woodwork needs painting very badly. The frames, sash and glass are otherwise in good condition, excepting that in many places the inside window stool has lost its finish and become rough and badly stained, even in important rooms. This is caused by drip of condensation of moisture from the air on the inside of the glass in cold weather.

I recommend as the least to be done, that the window sills be repaired and replaced, where necessary; that all cracks and joints be puttied tight, and that all external woodwork be painted two good coats of best white lead and oil, tinted if desired. Also that stools and other inside finish be smoothed, scraped and refinished, wherever necessary.

12. Upper Stone Columns of Dome.—These columns were made of Bedford stone, which has been blackened by smoke and dust, so that they do not match the remainder of the external masonry, as they should do, but have the appearance of sheet metal. This black coating could be removed by rubbing them down, but it would soon appear again, so that nothing can be done to improve their appearance, except painting them, which I certainly should not advise.

The interior of the building has in many places been badly stained and injured by water that has leaked in through the main roof and the main gutter, loosening the plastering and destroying the decorations. These damages will rapidly increase, but it would be useless to restore this work until after the entire roof and gutters are made water-tight, so as to permanently prevent such injuries in the future. However, the attention of the committee should be called to those found by me in the interior of the building.

13. Committee Rooms on Fourth Floor.—These rooms are very imperfectly lighted by low windows and all probably require additional electric lights. Their walls were tinted in distemper and have been much injured by leakage. They should be washed off clean, all cracks and injuries be made good, and, together with the metal ceilings, they should then be painted three coats in flatted lead and oil colors. The woodwork requires to be refinished. The corridors adjacent should be cleaned and refinished in the same manner. These rooms in the House wing are all occupied by important committees, but those in the Senate wing are not now used, but would be serviceable for committees or offices, if repaired.

14. Committee Rooms on Third Floor.—The condition of these rooms is not quite so bad as those above them, but their walls and ceilings should be cleaned and be painted three coats in flatted lead and oil colors, where this has not already been done. Some of the corridors have been treated in this manner.

15. Senate Chamber.—In the gallery along the western side of the room, the vaulted plaster ceiling has been badly stained by water in many places. The middle dome over each compartment appears to be all right. It will be necessary to wash off the stained vaults and to coat them again to match the remainder in color.

The window stools need to be scraped, sand-papered, filled, varnished and rubbed down, using a varnish not injured by water.

The columns between Senate Chamber and western gallery are peeled and flaked in many places, especially on the side next the chamber. They should be cleaned and redecorated to match those on the eastern side, which are very little injured.

The main ceiling of the chamber appears to be uninjured and needs no repairs at present.

16. Geological Museum.—There is a large and very bad stain on the western side, caused by a leak above it, which has already much injured the appearance of the room. This part of the wall should be cleaned and redecorated to match the remainder as nearly as possible.

17. Representatives Hall.—Some scagliola panels are wanting on the columns below the gallery on the eastern side of the hall, and these should be replaced. It would scarcely be possible to get an artist to match the others in scagliola, so that the best method would probably be to replace the panels in hard finished plaster, then having the marble imitated by a competent painter, finishing with a few coats of white Dammar varnish, rubbed down to a smooth surface.

The ceiling of the main hall is uninjured, but the vaults over the galleries are stained in places. These stained compartments should be washed off and recoated to match in color.

The piers between the western windows require cleaning and redecorating also. Some pieces of black marble base are loose and should be reset.

18. Water Tank.—A large water tank for supplying the sanitary fixtures in the toilet rooms of the Senate and House is placed inside one of the main piers beneath the great dome. It is built of wood and lined with sheet lead, but has evidently leaked at times, staining the wall outside it and the ceilings below. This tank should at once be replaced by a closed steel tank of equal capacity, constructed in the best manner, made tight, set with proper connections, and protected by a drip pan beneath it to catch drip from condensation, with waste pipe to a toilet fixture below. This tank would have to be built in place, and since the space in the pier is limited, it might be necessary to place it elsewhere on the fourth floor.

19. Toilet Rooms.—The sanitary fixtures are said to be satisfactory, although the closets are rear washouts and such as would not be used now in a good job. They are not nearly as good as the syphon jet closet commonly used in good hotels, and the long seat permits misuse by persons not accustomed to such fixtures. But the main supply pipes are much too small, especially in the Representatives' toilet room, where a considerable number of closets may be in use at the same time during conventions. This should be remedied at once by putting in a large main supply pipe from the water tank, for the present arrangement produces an intolerable nuisance, especially since the toilet rooms are very near the legislative chambers.

20. Library.—The ceiling and walls of the upper galleries at the ends of the room are badly injured by leakage from above, which has saturated the walls and produced a thick white efflorescence on the walls and ruined the decorations. The main ceiling of the middle part of the library is in good condition, excepting a few spots.

After the roof is made tight, these injured portions in the galleries should be scraped and washed to thoroughly remove all nitre, then redecorated, and the spots made good elsewhere.

The internal woodwork and blinds require refinishing also.

21. North Corridor on Second Floor.—The floor is laid with marble tiles, forming ornamental patterns, and many of these tiles are now loose, which is said to be due to their having been set on a layer of plaster of Paris instead of cement. The tiles are not evenly worn and are considerably chipped and injured. The entire floor of this corridor should be taken up, using new material for the middle portion, where it is most injured, as the ornamental borders can perhaps be used again if carefully taken up and cleaned. Then the entire floor should be carefully relaid in cement on cement concrete, using the best German Portland cement, of light color, that will not stain the marble.

A large marble panel has fallen off at the end of this corridor from the lower part of the wall. Possibly it could be matched with another of like color and veining. Otherwise the remaining panel could be removed, replacing both by matched panels.

22. Steam Piping.—The steam supply and return pipes are built into the main walls and floors, branches extending out to the radiators set on the floors. Hence, leakage from radiators or pipes only becomes evident when the water drips through the ceiling beneath and commences to injure the plaster and decorations.

This is a very great defect in the construction of the building, a mistake that would scarcely be committed at this time by any architect. Its object was to prevent the pipes from injuring the internal effect of the building and of its decorations. These pipes should have been placed within large ducts constructed in the walls and floors, sufficiently large to permit access to the pipes and to remove them for repairs, which could then be made without injury to floors and walls or defacing decorations. The only method for repairing these pipes now is to cut them out of the walls and floors, put in new ones, repairing damages as far as possible, which can not be made good in rooms with wooden floors.

Since it would be scarcely possible now to cut such large ducts in the vertical inner walls without serious damage to the security and stability of the building, the only method of getting rid of this evil permanently would be the radical one of putting in a new system of steam pipes exposed to view, then bronzed or painted so as to interfere as little as possible with the decorations and internal effect of the building. These could be arranged on the downward single pipe system, so as to require but one down pipe to a series of radiators in a vertical line on the different floors.

Or, since the system of ventilation of the entire building is said to be insufficient and unsatisfactory, the radiators might be removed and the building warmed and ventilated by one of the hot-air-blast systems that are now successfully installed by several different makers, and which might be placed in the sub-basement or cellar. Of course, the difficulties in handling a building of such dimensions, with such high ceilings and with the great central dome, would be very great, but not insurmountable. My own experience has been that the chief difficulty in the satisfactory working of such a system of heating and ventilating a large building, is in getting the official in charge to run it in the manner intended by its makers. Direct steam heating affords less opportunity for ignorant handling.

23. Gas Piping.—This system is said to be built into the walls and ceiling like the steam pipes, and that repairs can only be made by cutting out defective pipes. Since this is the usual method, and one found satisfactory generally, there seems no good reason for decay or disappearance of pipes unless they are surrounded by plaster of paris, when the sulphuric acid corrodes the iron gradually, or it might result from using the gas pipes for grounding electric currents, when pin holes are often produced in pipes, especially where they are damp or wet. Leaks might often occur from defective workmanship or material, when the pipes were originally run. This danger does not seem very serious, unless sufficient gas escapes to cause an explosion, and this is not likely to occur before the leak is noticed.

24. New Storage Vaults in Sub-basement.—I went through most of the sub-basement with Captain Beck, and it seems to be already occupied for storage and similar purposes, excepting a space under the east portico, which is vaulted, but might be too damp, and is now filled with extra or rejected blocks of the artificial decorations of the upper part of the building. Some of the required vaults might be built there, but electric lights would be required, outside lighting not being available. There would be no special difficulty in constructing storage vaults wherever sufficient space could be secured in the sub-basement. These vaults could be built very readily, requiring only 12-inch hard brick walls in cement with the usual double steel vault doors and frames with combination locks, as they would not be used for valuable articles. Any good builder could construct them without difficulty, after their location is settled.

25. Proposed Extension of Law Library.—It is proposed to add the room now occupied as an appellate conference room, to the law library, materially increasing its length. The arrangement and construction of the main library above could not be disturbed. It is desired to entirely remove the thick masonry wall between the law library and the appellate room, which is about 44 feet long, 22 feet high, and 2½ feet thick, with a large doorway about 7x10 feet near its center. This wall now extends about 16 feet high above floor of main library and supports one side of upper gallery floor, loaded by books and cases; also five cast iron columns carrying arches, on which rest the ceilings of the gallery and of the main library.

It is not possible to know exactly what is the load now existing on the top of this wall, which it is desired to remove, but a careful estimate gives 193 tons as the probable load at the top of the division wall on the entire span of 44 feet. I will consider several methods for replacing the wall.

a. A steel box girder spanning the entire distance, with ends resting on cast iron plates set in main walls. This would permit the entire removal of the division wall and would not require any intermediate columns.

By calculation, I find that a steel box girder 24 inches wide and 4½ feet deep would safely carry the load of 193 tons. It would weigh about 8 tons and its upper edge would have to be set below the large cove between wall and ceiling of the law library, so that its lower edge would be about 16 feet above the floor of law library. The ceiling of the appellate room would not be changed from its present form. Then this girder would be covered externally with expanded metal or wire netting, plastered, and decorated to harmonize with the rest of the interior. It would require cast iron bed plates of about 20 square feet area each under its ends to properly distribute its load over the masonry of the main walls. It would be a very difficult job to insert these plates, set the girder in place, and make the masonry good, without damage to the building. And I do not think that its appearance when completed would be satisfactory. Hence, I do not recommend it, although it would be most convenient when completed.

b. Leave the division wall in place and cut large arched openings through it to join the two rooms.

Taking into account the weight of the division wall itself and the load supported by it, I find that it will be safe to remove the finish from the doorway and cut the opening into semi-circular form at top, then cutting another opening 6 feet wide in the clear through the wall at each side of the middle opening, leaving masonry piers between them 6½ feet wide, these openings likewise being arched at top. The openings should not extend over 10 feet high from floor, and an arch in hard bricks set in Portland cement should be turned carefully over each, all crevices between this and the masonry of the wall being made good with cement, slate and bricks. It would not be safe to make these openings wider, because the masonry piers between them would be too heavily loaded to be safe. These piers would then be wainscoted to match walls of rooms, and above this would be plastered and decorated to match them also. Similar openings can be also cut through the upper part of this wall over the side openings below to connect the gallery of the law library with the gallery to be built in the upper part of the appellate room.

For greater safety, I earnestly advise that the floor of this gallery be then made of steel and glass or marble slabs, like the system used by the Library Bureau company, to be as light as possible, and that this floor, the cases and the books be supported by the floor of the appellate room and not by the division wall between this room and the law library. If this be done, this method for extending the law library would be reasonably satisfactory when completed, and it would be by far the one most economical in cost.

c. By substituting a line of four metallic columns and a steel girder resting on them for the present masonry division wall.

Using four columns set 8.8 feet on centers, and requiring them to support one side of the new gallery floor in the appellate room with its load of books and cases, I obtain the following results:

The steel girder to support the load above and rest on tops of columns would be composed of two 12-inch 32 $\frac{1}{2}$ -pound I-beams bolted together.

Cast iron columns 9 inches in diameter and $\frac{3}{4}$ inch metal would be about like those now used in law library, if I remember correctly, and would be ample.

It would be better to build these columns of four 3x $\frac{1}{4}$ inch steel Z-bars and five $\frac{3}{4}$ x $\frac{1}{4}$ plate, then fireproofing and plastering them externally, although the cast iron columns would harmonize best with the others now in the law library.

Under each column should be set a cast iron bed plate of five square feet area to properly distribute the load over the masonry wall beneath.

This method of extending the law library would be less expensive than the first method and considerably more so than the second, but I believe that it would have the best appearance when completed and best harmonize with the present interior; but either method would probably be much more costly than is expected and would therefore scarcely be adopted.

Accordingly, I suggest that no attempt be made to remove the division wall, but that the appellate room be either fitted with the usual library stacks in two stories and be used for books that are not often required, or the galleries of the law library may be extended into the appellate room, connecting them by doorways cut through the division wall above the floors of the galleries.

Very respectfully submitted,

N. CLIFFORD RICKER,

*Dean College of Engineering, University of Illinois.
President State Board of Examiners of Architects.*

ELECTION LAWS.

Though not disposed to press upon the General Assembly my views concerning legislation, I would respectfully suggest a few amendments to our code of election laws, which seem to be called for.

The 42d General Assembly, in the confusion incident to the closing days of the session, passed three separate acts designed as amendments to section 30 of the act of 1872. (Paragraph 30, chapter 46, R. S.) Each of these acts provides that "Section 30 shall read as follows," but as each of the acts which follows this provision differs from the others, it is doubtful what constitutes section 30 of this act at this time. If it is desired to retain all the provisions of these three acts, these provisions should be incorporated in a single act amending section 30 of the act of 1872.

Sections 71 and 78 of the same act, providing for the canvassing of returns, and the making of abstracts by county clerks, fails to mention the office of clerk of the appellate court. This omission should be remedied. Further, the abstracts provided for in this section come to the office of the Secretary of State in as many different forms as the ingenuity of the various printing establishments of the State can devise, and frequently at variance with the plain provisions of the statutes. To secure facility in compiling the vote from these abstracts and the possibility of systematically filing them so that they may be convenient for reference, they should be uniform in character for all the counties of the State. To obtain this result, it would seem necessary to authorize some State official to prescribe a form for such abstract complying with the statutes, such forms to be furnished to each county clerk a reasonable time before each general election, as well as to all printers who shall apply for them.

Since the passage of the act of 1897 consolidating the several grand divisions of the Supreme Court, section 11 of the act of 1872, (paragraph 11, chapter 46, R. S.) providing for the election of clerks of the Supreme Court becomes obsolete. This section should be made to conform to the provisions of the act of 1897 above referred to (paragraph 3a, chapter 37, R. S.), and should be followed by a section providing for the election of clerks of the appellate court in conformity to paragraph 20, chapter 37, R. S.

Section 8 of the act of 1891 (paragraph 295, chapter 46, R. S.), permits the filing, with the Secretary of State, of withdrawals of nominations of candidates at any time not less than 15 days before the election. But the Secretary of State must certify all nominations to county clerks not less than 15 days before election. Under these provisions a candidate may file his declination with the Secretary of State on the same day in which the Secretary's certificate of nominations should be in the hands of the county clerks. I think this section should be so amended as to give the Secretary a reasonable time in which to make up, print and forward his certificate of nominations after the time for filing declinations shall have expired.

Section 10, of the same act (paragraph 297, chapter 46, R. S.) providing for the filing of objections to nomination certificates, puts no limit on the time for filing such objections. I think that a reasonable time should be given for filing objections after the time for filing nominations has expired; but that the time for filing objections should be so limited as to leave a reasonable time for notifying candidates objected to, for securing witnesses, preparing the case, hearing and determining the objections, and transmitting the result to the Secretary of State before the time when he is required by the statutes to certify nominations to county clerks. As the law now stands, where several such cases are pending at the same time, and all within a few days of the election, it is impossible for this office to fulfill all the requirements of the statutes with regard to such contests and to certifying nominations to county clerks. Further, some less cumbrous and less expensive method than that provided in this section should be devised for the hearing of objections to nominations of candidates in electoral districts greater than a county and less than a state. The tribunal provided by this section for hearing contests in such districts, (including all congressional, senatorial and judicial districts greater than a county) consists of the county judges of all the counties comprising such district. Among the many bad features of this method I call attention simply to the fact that any voter dissatisfied with the result of a nominating convention in the Third Appellate District, for instance, may, by filing in the office of the Secretary of State any trivial objection, compel the secretary to call together the county judges of 35 counties to hear and determine the merits of a political controversy between two parties or two factions of the same party. No provision whatever is made for the payment of expenses or per diem to the 35 county judges so assembled. All this may be done without a particle of expense to the objector. It seems to be an act encouraging litigation at the expense of the county judges of the State. They should be relieved of the burden and some simpler and less expensive method devised for settling such contests.

Section 14, of the same act (paragraph 301, chapter 46, R. S.) provides that constitutional amendments and other propositions to be submitted to a vote "shall be printed on the ballot after the list of candidates;" but Section 16, (paragraph 303, chapter 46, R. S.) as amended April 24, 1899, provides that such propositions "shall be printed on separate ballots." To avoid confusion I think the two sections should be made to harmonize.

These objections pointed out are simply a few stumbling blocks which present themselves to election officers at each recurring election. It seems to me that they may be easily removed, and without making any violent changes in our present code of election laws. I have enumerated only the instances in which slight changes will be productive of large results in the practical administration of the election laws, in so far as they relate to the duties of county clerks and of this department.

Section 62, Chapter 46, Revised Statutes, provides that one copy of the poll list and one copy of the tally paper, from each voting precinct in this State, be mailed to the Secretary of State immediately after each general election.

¶ It often becomes desirable, in case of contest, to identify the returns from a particular voting precinct without breaking the seal of the envelope. No provision has been made by law for uniformity in size or style of the envelope for use in making these returns, nor for the necessary endorsements thereon. To remedy this defect I suggest that the Secretary of State be required to furnish, in due time, to the county clerks of the various counties, these envelopes, properly printed, in sufficient quantities to supply each voting precinct.

FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.

Permit me to suggest that the law should be so amended that, before a foreign corporation can receive a license to transact business in Illinois, it should be required to pay the same fee which an Illinois corporation, with an equal amount of authorized capital stock, is required to pay.

And that the law should be further amended in such a manner that every foreign corporation transacting business in Illinois will be required to report to the Secretary of State, all increases of its authorized capital stock, in the same manner that domestic corporations are required to report such increases, and that such foreign corporations be required to pay the same fees for filing said certificates of increase of capital stock as are required of domestic corporations.

Including in this report a statement of the receipts of fees of this department, disbursements of the appropriations under my direction, together with a list of all corporations, domestic and foreign, licensed to do business in the State since Oct. 1, 1900. Also a list of the property in my hands as custodian of the property in the State building, statement of bids made on State contracts for printing, binding, coal, printing paper and stationery. Also report of proceedings of the State Library, Printer Expert, Distribution of Documents and statement of the paper account.

JAMES A. ROSE,
Secretary of State.

Have received in exchange and duly delivered to the Law Library 208 volumes of Supreme and Appellate Court reports, and 88 volumes of session laws of the various states.

We have incorporated the card catalogue issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture in our catalogue, thereby rendering more useful the valuable bulletins and yearbooks of that department.

The purchases for this term have been chiefly along the line of statistical reference, and political science; we have obtained all the leading books upon the subject of trusts.

Among other classes may be mentioned such additions as Moths and Butterflies of the United States; Furniture of our Forefathers; Modern Eloquence; complete works of John Fiske; Jewish Encyclopedia; complete files of Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, Current History and National Conference of Charities and Corrections.

Mention must be made of such notable gifts as Thomas F. Lawson's History of America's Cup; Yale bi-centennial publications; roster of officers of United States Army, 1861 to 1901.

The work of revising the catalogue has been completed. The greatest care has been taken in the preparation of it, and it is hoped the catalogue will be found a useful reference book, particularly by the small libraries in the State.

Respectfully submitted,

MAUDE THAYER,
Assistant State Librarian.

DOCUMENT DEPARTMENT.

The following is a statement of the number of printed documents handled by this department for the two years from October 1, 1900, to September 30, 1902:

	Copies received.	Copies distributed.
Reports of State officers, boards, commissioners, institutions, etc., printed and bound	785,805
Reports distributed to members of the General Assembly, State officers, boards, institutions, etc.		316,770
Printed and bound documents distributed on request		357,625
Blank books, including ledgers, blank books and other fifth class binding	3,972	3,972
Election registers	18,000	14,820
House bills, amendments, etc., 42d General Assembly, 1183 of 600 copies each	709,800
House bills, amendments, etc., delivered to clerk of House		354,900
House bills, amendments, etc., distributed by this office		215,000
Senate bills, amendments, etc., 42d General Assembly, 666 of 600 copies each	399,600
Senate bills, amendments, etc., delivered to secretary of the Senate		199,800
Senate bills, amendments, etc., distributed by this office		150,000
Supreme Court reports purchased and distributed.	4,220	4,220
Envelopes printed for State use, all kinds	817,725	817,725
Letter heads and blanks, all kinds and sizes	2,747,690	2,747,690

The documents distributed were forwarded either by mail or express, depending upon the size of the package. The express shipments during the two years numbered 17,749 packages, varying in weight from $1\frac{1}{2}$ pounds to 800 pounds. All packages weighing less than $1\frac{1}{2}$ pounds were sent by mail. The number of documents mailed is included in the above tabulation, but no account was kept of the number of packages mailed; however the number of packages mailed is far in excess of the number sent by express.

PUBLICATIONS.

There arises from time to time a demand on the part of the public for copies of certain laws, and for information from this office for the supplying of which no specific provision is made by statute. In response to such demands from the general public, and to meet the wants of certain officials of the State, I have published during the past two years the following documents:

The State Constitution of 1870, with a brief historical sketch of the Constitutions of 1818 and 1848.

Laws relating to Roads and Bridges, for the use of highway commissioners, supervisors and other officers.

Laws relating to incorporations.

Laws relating to elections, for the use of election officers and for the general public.

Laws relating to drainage, comprising all the drainage laws of the State. This is, I think, the first complete compilation of the drainage laws published.

Laws relating to Fish and Game, for the use of fish commissioners and game wardens, as well as for hunters and fishermen of the State desiring to know the requirements of the statutes concerning hunting and fishing.

Maps showing the Congressional and Senatorial apportionments of 1901, with copies of the apportionment acts to accompany them.

An Official List of all State Officers, including judicial, Congressional, Senatorial and county officers, together with various boards and commissions of the State.

The Official Vote of the election held Nov. 6, 1900, for general distribution.

Report of the Revenue Commission of 1886.

An Official List of all the Incorporated Municipalities of the State, showing the date of the organization of each, the law under which it is incorporated, the population under the last federal census, and other information of a like character not afforded by any previous publication.

Besides these pamphlets, a number of the laws enacted by the last General Assembly, in which the public were specially interested, were printed separately and given a wider circulation than was possible by means of printing in the session laws alone.

INCORPORATED MUNICIPALITIES.

The statutes impose upon the Secretary of State the duty of keeping in his office a correct list of all the incorporated cities, towns and villages of the State. My predecessors in office, as well as myself, have endeavored to comply with this requirement of the statutes, but the fact remains that it has never been possible for any Secretary of State to compile such a list that could be relied upon as accurate. The reasons for such inability are, first, municipal and county officers fail to report to this office, as the law directs, the organization of new municipalities; and, second, the statutes fail to make it the duty of either municipal or county officials to report to this office the extinction of towns and villages annexed to or consolidated with other municipalities.

To illustrate the first point, correspondence conducted by this office during six months of the year 1901 developed the fact that there were more than 100 municipalities of the State not of record on the official list of this office because of the failure of the municipal authorities to file with this office transcripts of their organization proceedings, as the law directs. To illustrate the second point, the dozen or more towns and villages in Cook county annexed to Chicago within the past few years, all stand recorded on the books of this office as existing individual municipalities, because there is no provision made by law for officially informing the Secretary of State of such annexations, nor for authorizing him to eliminate such extinct towns and villages from the official list he is required to keep.

The Forty-second General Assembly passed an act for the relief of such municipalities as had failed to record and file proper transcripts of their organization within the time prescribed by the statutes, which act authorized the Secretary of State to issue certificates of incorporation to all such delinquent municipalities upon their compliance with the provision of this act of 1901, within six months of its going into effect. Ninety-seven certificates of incorporation were issued to such delinquent municipalities within the six months during which the act was operative, while but 83 certificates had been issued to municipalities during the previous six years. More than one-half of the municipalities organized in the State during the past ten years failed to file with the Secretary of State transcripts of their organization proceedings until after this act of 1901.

In this connection, I submit herewith as a part of this report lists made up from the records of this office of 997 municipalities of the State, grouping them with reference to the acts under which they are incorporated. Of these 997 municipalities, 892 are now incorporated under the general law of 1872. Of this number, 297 were previously incorporated under special charters, but have since reorganized under the general law, while the remaining 606 never at any time held special charters; of 371 existing municipalities, which were organized prior to 1872 under special charters, 74 still retain their original special charters; and of the large number organized under general laws enacted prior to 1872, but eight still maintain their original organization, the others having all reorganized under the act of 1872. I also append a list of six municipalities having a de facto organization, and claiming to be incorporated under some general law of the State at some time prior to 1872, but having no transcript of their organization proceedings on file in this office; and still a further list of 19 municipalities, which, according to the records of this office, have a distinct municipal existence under the laws of the State, but which, according to credible but unofficial information received by this department, have been annexed to other municipalities and no longer exercise the functions of separate municipal incorporations.

I also add a list of eight names, representing 16 different municipalities of the State. Under each of these names there have been organized, and now exist, two distinct municipal incorporations. There is no specific provision of the statute preventing such duplication of names, and there seems to be no limit to the extent to which it may be indulged. Any newly organized village may, under the statutes, appropriate the name of Chicago or Springfield, or any other existing city. Such duplication of names can be prevented only by the adoption of legislation prohibiting it.

To enable the Secretary of State to comply with the duty imposed upon him by certain sections of the statutes, to enable existing municipalities to remedy defects of their organization, to prevent, as far as possible, such negligence in the future, and to make consistent the different provisions of the act of 1872, I would respectfully suggest the enactment of laws embodying the following amendments to existing statutes:

1. An act similar in its purpose to the remedial act of 1901, but having one year to run instead of but six months.
2. An act authorizing the Secretary of State to issue a certificate of incorporation to any municipality organized under the act of 1872, a transcript of whose organization proceedings have been filed in his office in compliance with law, irrespective of whether organized before or after July 1, 1895.
3. An act incorporating in article 11, chapter 24 of the Revised Statutes (which relates to the organization of villages only) that provision of the statutes concerning the filing of transcript of organization proceedings. This provision now appears only in article 1 of said chapter, and is generally overlooked by those having to do with the organization of villages.

4. An act making it the duty of the municipality, to which another municipality is annexed, to file with the Secretary of State a certified copy of the order of court confirming such annexation, and authorizing the Secretary of State to strike from his official list the names of such municipality so annexed.

5. An act protecting existing municipalities in the use of the names they have adopted, and prohibiting the Secretary of State from issuing a certificate of incorporation to any municipality organizing under a name already adopted by another incorporated city, town or village.

The following list includes all cities and villages of the State, 892 in number, incorporated under the law of 1872, and embraces all municipalities organized from new territory since July 1, 1872, as well as those incorporated under general laws and special acts prior to that date, but since reorganized under the general law. Those to which charters, or certificates of incorporation, have been issued by the Secretary of State under the act of 1895 are indicated by either (*) or (†) marking those to which such charters have been issued since July 1, 1901.

The table, summarized, shows that of the 892 municipalities organized under the general law of 1872, 217 hold charters, or certificates of incorporation, issued by the Secretary of State, 89 of which charters were issued prior to July 1, 1901, and 128 since that date. The remaining 675 municipalities hold no such charters or certificates as prima facie evidence of their incorporation,

In addition to the foregoing list the following cities, towns and villages appear on the records of this office. I am unofficially but credibly informed, however, that they have been annexed to other cities and no longer exist as distinct municipalities. There is no statute requiring information concerning such annexations to be reported to the Secretary of State and no authority given him for striking from the official list the names of municipalities so annexed. Probably there are other names which should be added to this list.

PRINTER EXPERT'S REPORT.

To the Honorable Commissioners of State Contracts:

GENTLEMEN—It is unnecessary in this brief report from the Department of State Printing, to refer except in a general way to the immense and increasing volume of business which has passed through the department the past year. A detailed statement of the work accompanies this report and is worthy of your careful consideration. That this work has been done economically and as expeditiously as the circumstances would permit, and lately in a more workmanlike manner than ever before, has been a satisfaction to me and must be also to you. The office force that has been placed at my command has brought the work of the department up to a high grade of efficiency. As far as I am able to observe, there was never a better feeling between the printing department and the other departments of the State government than at the present time.

We felt, on taking charge of the work, that too little attention had been paid to the book-keeping of the department. It was impossible on going over the record of the previous years to get a clear and accurate idea of what had been done. All this has been gradually changed with practically no additional expense to the State, until now we have a greatly improved and really complete system of keeping the run of the work and of so keeping the books that succeeding administrations will be able to understand in detail every transaction of the department.

This necessarily demands more attention and leaves less time for the equally important work of proof-reading. On this account, and because of the natural increase in the volume of business from year to year, the force provided by the old law has not sufficient time for the proof-reading necessary to insure absolute accuracy. The one additional proof-reader furnished by courtesy of the Secretary of State has more than he can do. To secure the desired degree of perfection in State proof-reading another team of readers is necessary, that a second reading may be had by a different team, one team acting as a check on the other. No proof-reader can find all the errors in a single reading, especially in the difficult tabular work that forms so large a part of the printed reports. The expense of this additional team (proof-reader and copy-holder) would be comparatively small, and would bring the work of this department up to a degree of perfection that would no doubt be very gratifying to your honorable board, to myself, and to all connected with the administration.

Respectfully submitted,

CHARLES P. BURTON,
State Printer Expert.
